A system of universal training for universal service would be one of the biggest things ever done in this country to preserve our democratic institutions in spirit and in fact, the Colonel declared. Even should peace come in Europe to-merrow, he declared, it

The number in the crowd lining the streets to the hotel can only be guessed—seventy-five thousand probably would be conservative. The trip was one continuous ovation, and at the hotel were more people waiting. They, too, demanded a speech, and he went to a balcony and spoke for ten minutes. It was the same on the way to Convention Hall, where 16,500 people awaited him, and where as many more were turned away. It was the same after his speech—fully five thousand had waited outside just for a chance to yell their approval when the Colonel emerged.

The reception of the speech was equally enthusiastic, applause punctuating every telling point of the Colonel's theme. The Colonel stuck closely to his prepared speech, only making excursions to repeat the figures on the losses of life in Mexico and on the high seas, which he had given many times before. Of Mexico he said:

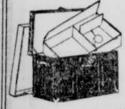

"I was going to say a little war, but I'll say, instead, the kind of peace where men shoot and kill one another."

Again he spoke bitterly of the Wilson policy with regard to submarines.

"We have kept the peace. Our women and children have been murdered by scores, and no strong man in an American uniform has raised a hand to protect. And that's the way we have a peace."

The Colonel was entertained at luncheon by the Commercial Club of the city, and after the menus spoke for half an hour on preparedness as peace insurance. In this address he told the story of the crisis with Venezuela as an instance of how to enforce peace. His talk was punctuated with applause, and closed with one of Republicans Force In-

Why Not Face the Facts About Armor Competition?

To the People:

The policy of the United States Government for many years has made any real competition in armor-making ineffective.

The Government has considered it good policy to so distribute its armor business as to maintain a large reserve armor-making capacity ready for emergencies.

> The Government might have asked the three armor plants for bids and let the entire tonnage to the lowest bidder. That would have made competition effective.

The result of such a course would have been to drive two of the three manufacturers out of business, and leave the country with the facilities of only one plant in time of need.

> The Government in fact has always asked for bids from the three manufacturers, but no matter what the prices quoted, each year's business was divided among them.

These are the results of that policy:

The United States gets the best armor in the world.

It pays a lower price than that paid by any other great naval power, and Without extra expense it has available a large reserve armor making capacity.

Armor makers serve but one customer-the Government, just as a PUBLIC UTILITY serves but one customer-a community.

The solution of the public utility problem is regulation of rates.

The solution of the armor problem is for the Government to fix the price.
